BOOK SYNOPSIS

1905 INDIA: Clarissa Belhaven and her younger sister Olive find their carefree life on their fathers tea plantation threatened by his drinking and debts. Wesley Robson, a brash young rival businessman, offers to help save the plantation in exchange for beautiful Clarries hand in marriage, but her father flatly refuses. And when Jock Belhaven dies suddenly, his daughters are forced to return to their fathers cousin in Tyneside and work long hours in his pub. In Newcastle, Clarrie is shocked by the dire poverty she witnesses, and dreams of opening her own tea room, which could be a safe haven for local women. To provide a living for herself and Olive, Clarrie escapes her dictatorial cousin Lily and takes a job as housekeeper for kindly lawyer Herbert Stock. But Herberts vindictive son Bertie, jealous of Clarries popularity, is determined to bring about her downfall. Then Wesley Robson comes back into Clarries life, bringing with him a shocking revelation ... Set in the fascinating world of the Edwardian tea trade, THE TEA PLANTERS DAUGHTER is a deeply involving and moving story with a wonderfully warm-hearted heroine. One of the Tyneside Sagas.
